MONTREAL, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1926.

OUR SISTER UNIVERSITIES

But once in every three years do the representatives of the several universities that compete for supremacy in the various branches of athletics gather at McGill to decide who shall be the winner of a major championship. This is one of the triennial occasions: for this afternoon at the Percival Molson Memorial Stadium athletes from the University of Western Ontario, The University of Toronto and Queen's University will gather with McGill men for the Canadian Intercollegiate Track Meet. For seven years McGill has held the Track Championship, and her team will make a strong effort to-day to retain it.

As this is a real intercollegiate day, it is a fitting occasion to consider what we, as students of the universities of Canada, have in common, and what ties other than those of athletic contests bind us together. First, we are all undergraduate students, as distinguished from the members of the business and professional class; and, as such, we are seeking to prepare ourselves for life—life which will be lived in the same world, perhaps even in the same country or city or town. Then, too, we are at present citizens of the same country—a country whose problems are trying but whose future will be great if we would make it so; we share the responsibilities and the resources of Canada, and we must shoulder these responsibilities and develop these resources together. Lastly, we as university students have a common duty to humanity—to a war-torn, heavily-armed and ever-suspicious world, which waits wearily for guidance. We have but to turn our faces intelligently to the East or to the West to see the task that awaits, nay, demands us all.

But, with all this, what of the things that separate us? Distance, differences in natural advantages and in local problems—merely what suffices to give us our individualities.

And so to-day to Western, to Varsity and to Queen's, as sister universities, we extend a very hearty welcome, and we wish them all a pleasant stay on our campus.

CONDENSED COMMENT

The publication in this number of the Daily of the results of yesterday's voting indicates that only about one-quarter of the undergraduates availed themselves of the opportunity of registering their support of the candidates whom they supported. This is probably, in part, due to the fact that many of the new men are not yet even aware that they have the right to vote; and in part, to the fact that none of the candidates had very active campaigns.

Among the societies which merit the support of all undergraduates is the McGill Choral Society, which is now commencing its practices, and is looking forward to a successful season. We understand that there is still an opportunity for those interested in singing to join the society. It is an opportunity that is well worth while.

ROOTER' PRACTICE IS HUGE SUCCESS

Duckworth Led "The Thundering Thousand"

The thundering thousand justified their name as the giant rooter's practice held yesterday at the stadium. It certainly gratified the hearts, if it strained the voices, of the three cheer leaders, Jack Duckworth, Bill Hewson and Lloyd Merrill.

The band was unfortunately unable to be present with the result that not many songs were attempted, but the yells called forth a great deal of enthusiasm and it must have given the team much encouragement to feel that they were so well supported.

After the regular practice had come to an end, at an early hour in order to let the men vote, if they had not done so, the Science sophomores and freshmen arrived on the scene, the latter being joined together by means of a rope, prison-style. Although they looked somewhat rueful and dejected, nevertheless they cheered with a good will since there was no other way out.

The cheer leaders wish to thank the sophomores for their aid in making the practice a successful one, and only regret that they could not bring their flock up earlier. Since there seems to be no way in which the freshmen can be made to turn out in a body, voluntarily, the science sophomores seem to have discovered the only correct alternative. It is to be hoped

HARKNESS; COMMERCE 1927 ANNUAL CHOICE

Early preparation for this year's edition of the Annual was in progress yesterday, when meetings were called for the purpose of electing Annual representatives. Commerce, who were the first to convene, voted Harkness as their choice.

The big volume is a combination of a Juno or a year book. It contains a record of all the preceding year's activities at the University, and is as interesting to the freshmen as to the seniors. It has had roving support in previous years, and if one may judge from the early activity, this next edition will prove no exception to the rule.

MISS ALICE TURNER ON ANNUAL BOARD

Miss Alice Turner was unanimously elected to the position of Annual Representative at the meeting of R. V. C. '27 yesterday.

After some discussion it was decided to purchase the R. V. C. banner as has been customary for Juniors in past years.

The president, then, urged the class on behalf of the sports manager, Miss D. M. Roberts, to make an effort to sell as many tickets as possible for Sports Day.

however that all the students will turn out to root for the team at the Queen's game on Saturday and so give the team the support it deserves.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ONLY.

No communication will be admitted in this column without the name of the writer being attached, not necessarily for PUBLICATION.

The Editor,
McGill Daily.

In the literary page of Wednesday's Daily, there is an article entitled, "Dialogue of a Sunday night." I wonder what thoughts the author was trying to arouse. If he expected a controversy, I trust he will be disappointed, the article is not worth it. Technically it may be faultless, I don't pretend to judge; clever it undoubtedly is, but true it certainly is not. Truth, I would remind the author, is conveyed by impression, not merely by words. The impression I received is this, that it is a damnable lie.

Atheism and Christianity both exist and each sect has sincere members, but remember, any great sect or institution has its parasites, even a University. But I write for this reason, as one who honestly believes in Christianity. I resent very strongly any "slurs" cast upon it. It is an institution which has withstood fierce attacks for centuries, it is standing now and will not only stand, but in the future will progress.

Whether it be the only true religion is not the point to be discussed here, but as a tremendous force in the history of the world and as a possible remedy for the troubles of the world, it certainly is not a subject for cynicism. Challenge it if you will, but don't be cynical about it.

Mr. A. J. M. Smith would think, spend his time more profitably, by applying his cynicism to less vital matters or else by not applying it to any thing at all.

Yours sincerely,
E. CLIFFORD KNOWLES.

The Editor,
McGill Daily.

Dear sir:—I want—in defence of my intellectual respectability—to assure your readers that I did not say some of the things that your reporter ascribes to me in your issue of to-day.

I did not know that I was being reported; and the address was an intimate, neglige affair. I would have dotted some 's and crossed some 't's if I had had any idea that there was a 'che' among us taking notes. But even at that the result is awful.

Will you let me say that I did not launch a charge of general illiteracy against Mr. MacKenzie King. I said that I had heard him twice in a speech use the locution "different than than." I have heard other people who ought to know better use it. What I said was that whoever used it, that kind of thing is illiterate. And it is.

May I add my voice to the general chorus of regret for the demise of the Literary Supplement?

Yours very truly,
RICHARD ROBERTS.

Dear sir:—It has been with great interest that I have read the correspondence in your columns concerning the formation of a Society to entertain visitors at the University.

When the football team went to Dartmouth last fall, I am quite sure that the thing that struck them most was the reception, care and attention they were given by the Green Key, the Dartmouth College official entertainment Society.

The team was met at the station by half-a-dozen members of this Society, who looked after our baggage, trunks, etc., and conducted us to the houses, which were waiting for us. When we rooms. The results of these analyses showed remarkable differences in ink of the same class, operating under similar conditions. These variables included such features as pigment black, quality, quantity, density and fluidity of the ink.

Owing to the variation observed in news ink composition, the first step was to make up inks which might be regarded as ideal from the commercial point of view. These experimental inks were carefully prepared, and after having been subjected to appropriate physical tests governing consistency, were then tried on a platen press. Various qualities of newspaper paper were used including good, average and poor finish, as well as high, average, and low moisture content. Various adulterations of the ink were practised to determine the effect of such impurities on the finished news sheet. The results of these tests proved that certain standards of control are absolutely necessary to govern the production of a satisfactory news sheet. One important deduction was that the quality of newspaper ink is so far as finished and average moisture are concerned has very little effect in this class of printing.

The outcome of these preliminary tests was the preparation of several lots of ink on the large scale and the subsequent running of these inks in a modern press of the Pointain type, at 15,000 copies per hour, under ordinary newspaper producing conditions. These tests were actually carried out in the press room of one of the large dailies in Toronto, using the high-speed press noted above. A detailed discussion of the various results obtained on both the stationary and high-speed presses was illustrated by specimens of the actual printing. Attention was directed to the important differences in both advertising and news value as illustrated in the contrast between the half tone and not to the ink, where we were to stay; the senior member in charge introduced us to the manager of the inn, and generally tried to make things as easy as possible for us.

DAILY FILES

It has been the custom in former years to publish in the Daily some comments of interest from Dailies of former years. This is the first time it has been done this year, but it will be carried on occasionally.

line cuts, heavy face type and closely printed statistics, which appealed directly to the reader of the daily newspaper. It was pointed out that the practical tests run on the large scale precisely confirmed the tests made upon the stationary press, investigating the requirements of an ideal commercial news ink. The features emphasized as a result of this work are that the oil vehicle of a news ink exerts a most important influence upon the nature and appearance of the printing of the daily newspaper. It is a matter of great technical importance to closely supervise the production of the news ink in order to obtain the results which all publishers desire. Inferior inks were pointed out and methods of overcoming these suggested. As a result of this investigation the publisher, in order to meet the requirements demanded by the reading public should determine the quality of the ink which will best suit his purpose and maintain the specification by careful examination and testing.

GRIDIRON GUS TELLS STORIES OF OLD BATTLES

Gridiron Gus says:

The routers made another feeble attempt yesterday and last night brought out some three hundred or exactly three tenths of the defunct "Thundering 1000". This, however, was a good improvement over Tuesday and it is not too much to hope that there will be a good turnout to-morrow. The Science sophs, (some of them) brought up several Freshmen on the end of a rope and these latter were invited to exercise their vocal chords. They did. Among the upperclass men there were many "absent faces" which of course is to be expected. They must retain their dignity.

The scrimmage arranged for the routers was a costly one for McGill. Sullivan, the snap, received a nasty jolt in the side when clipping and was forced to retire. He may be out of the game to-morrow, in which case Wright is the most likely substitute. Walsh and Millen were on the sidelines to-day but both will be in action to-morrow. St. Germain surprised the fans by appearing on the field "sans cast" and will be available for the Queen's game.

Now, gentlemen, I am going to tell you a little story I dug out of the "Daily" files. It is a story of a gridiron battle of fourteen years ago with a team from the same college that McGill plays to-morrow. It is a story that the old graduates tell at the banquet after the Old Boy's game. And it is a story of the spirit of old the Queens punter began a series of kicks to keep the ball out of the danger zone but Billington's return kept him back up the field, until McGill had the ball at centre field. Then came the stellar play of the year. On the first down FROM CENTRE FIELD AND AT AN EXTREMELY DIFFICULT ANGLE BEING ONLY TEN YARDS FROM THE TOUCH LINE, BILLINGTON KICKED THE MOST MAGNIFICENT FIELD GOAL EVER SEEN IN CANADA BEFORE OR SINCE THAT TIME and the final whistle blew a moment after.

GEORGE LAING

The fighting spirit had won the game for McGill. That was fourteen years ago, but the fighting spirit has not died. It was living in 1920 when the McGill team in the play-off at Kingston with the Varsity squad put up one of the greatest battles in gridiron history. With both half backs weakened by heavy tackling and unable to carry the ball the middles and outsiders took the ball from the 10 yard line, in the shadow of their own goal post and bucked it up the field for a touch. They went over again for a touch only to have the play called off-side and the whistle blew giving Varsity the championship. McGill has lost tough battles before, but the fighting spirit still lives. It was living last year when the McGill team dropping every game came back in the final to win from Varsity. It lives to-day as anyone could see who had the sense to go up to the stadium and see the squad in action.

Famous McGill half-back who snatched victory from Queen's by a wonderful field goal in 1911.

McGill, and its team that fights to the end.

The McGill squad in 1911 was an exceedingly good team. But in the game played in Kingston that year, they found themselves being hopelessly outclassed by the Presbyterian squad. Six minutes before the final whistle the score stood McGill 1 Queen's 19. The final score was McGill 20 Queen's 19. Impossible you say. It happens only in the movies. That's what the Queen's routers thought too. They didn't reckon with the fighting spirit of Old McGill. In the six minutes McGill scored sixteen points and left the Kingstonians dumfounded.

The massacre started in the dying moments of the game when Billy Billington kicked over for a touch and Masson repeated with another a few minutes later. Then the ball was off. A series of plays McGill in possession of their opponents thirty yard line when suddenly George Laing shot around the end of his line and ran down the field for a thirty yard dash to a touch. It was not converted.

Queen's kicked off again and started a determined effort that was short-lived. In the midst of a play in which the Presbyterian halves were passing the ball, "Silver" Quilty shot through and stole the ball out of mid-air and before anyone realized what was happening, was tearing down the field kicking a merry farrow to the Queen's team. Realizing that he could not make the goal line he passed the ball to the fleet Jack Lewis who went over but was dragged back two yards out. On the next play Garthshore went over for a touch but Billington converted.

The score was now 19 to 17 for Queen's with only moments to go and their lead comparatively safe. Dazlett ing after 4 or 5 of the team. The next night, after the game, they reserved seats for us at a theatre in Hanover, and tried to fill up the whole party with sodas and soft drinks before the show.

For the two days that we were there 2 or 3 of the Society were always around the lobby of the Inn, and were only too willing to guide any of us to any place we desired to go. They did everything they could to make our stay an enjoyable one, and I certainly think they succeeded.

Now why can't we at McGill entertain our visitors in the same manner? Perhaps we could not start our Society on such a wide basis as this. Each member of their Society was given a certain amount of money to spend on visitors, and they of course had a special fund for this purpose. How much they spend a year on entertainments of this sort, I have unfortunately no idea.

There is, however, no reason why we cannot have a society of this sort on a more moderate basis. A Society that could arrange for a visiting team's accommodation, transportation from the station etc. Three or four of the members could be at the station to meet visitors to the University and otherwise look after them.

By "visitor" of course is meant any person or group of persons visiting the University for any reason at all, and in by no means limited to athletic teams.

I think a Society of this sort would at the least enhance McGill's reputation as far as entertainment of its visitors is concerned—a reputation which has been by no means great in the past, unfortunately.

Yours truly,
F. CAMPBELL COPE.
